CRISTO BULAN

La Marchesa Luisa Casati 1881-1957

The Belle Époque's most notorious socialite,
The Marchesa Luisa Casati was known for her theatrical and macabre extravagance.
She held residences in Paris, Venice, and Rome, and held court with the great artists of her time, many of whom excitedly added her striking image and eccentric persona to their catalog of works.
Known for macabre theatrics at her parties, she also relished the daily spectacle of strolling with her diamond-leashed cheetahs and painted servants.
At the height of her glory, this near-mythic persona created a world of occultish grandeur and eccentric magnificence that today has yet to be paralleled.
